BELOVED RESIDENT OF COLMA PASSES AWAY AT AGE OF 104

The end of one hundred and four years on this earth came on Sunday, May 20, when Mrs. Marina Lagomarsino passed away at her home in Colma. She was the wife of the late Tomaso Lagomarsino, and mother of Joseph and Mrs. Rose Lagomarsino, and August Lagomarsino of Stockton, Mrs. Victoria Arata and Stephen Lagomarsino of Italy, and the late Assunta Arata and Louisa Lagomarsino.

The funeral of Marina Lagomarsino, which took place last Wednesday, May 23, was decidedly notable.

It marked the end of our only centenarian, the deceased having reached the sublime age of one hundred and four years, sixty-one spent in sunny Italy and the last forty-three in our own California.

All these years the doctor was never needed, except during the last few months.

She was the mother of a large family and, besides, she was so industrious she could not content herself without constant occupation. It was not her nature to take any time to rest.

She was devoutly religious. Every Sunday and holiday found her at her place of worship in the simplest garb of her native land.

In her love of work, simplicity of manner, and faithfulness to her religious training she set a worthy example for her children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren, all of whom entertained for her the tenderest regard and esteem.

Her best known son, in this locality, Joseph Lagomarsino, over eighty years of age, was the one with whose family she lived. Her best known grandchild is George Lagomarsino, noted for his industry and enterprise, in both this county and San Francisco.

Every respect was shown the exemplary old mother. Numerous friends and relatives knelt beside her casket in the home where she passed away. Very delicate floral pieces softened the presence of death. The church was taxed to its utmost to accommodate the large number that gathered at her funeral. An excellent choir rendered the choicest of vocal solos. Four priests joined in celebrating the solemn requiem mass for the repose of her soul. The parish priests spoke earnestly, in her native language, of the remarkably long life that had come to such a peaceful end. The passing of this centenarian will not be forgotten.

MRS. FONSECA TENDERS SHOWER TO DAUGHTER

Thompson, of Oakland, Mrs. Annie Strathearn and sons Jimmie and Jack, Mr. Arthur Fonseca, Mr. William Fields and Billie Elder.

Later in the evening several other friends called and at midnight home made enchilades were served. The evening was spent in playing games and dancing to music furnished by Fred Bell, pianist, and E. Pimental, saxophone. The evening guests were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dreyer, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Capell, Mr. and Mrs. W. Regan, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Bodien, Mr. and Mrs. F. Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. H. Baumeister and Mrs. Hattie Richardson.

EAGLES ENTERTAIN PAST PRESIDENTS

Last Saturday evening the local order of Eagles held a banquet and entertainment in Eagles Hall in honor of the Past Presidents and Veteran Eagles.

The meeting opened with an initiation of a large class of new members, the ceremony being conducted by Past President George Heim and other Past Presidents.

Following the initiation ten Veteran Eagles were presented with a twenty year gold service button, the presentation speech being made by Past President Arthur J. Bodien.

The master of ceremonies for the evening was Past President John T. Doyle, and much credit is due him and his assistants for their efforts in making the occasion an evening of pleasure.

A well prepared supper was served by Pete Pavlos, Wm. Bolger, and committee, featuring entertainment between courses.

Through the efforts of Arthur Garrett, Past President of San Francisco Aerie No. 5, John T. Doyle and Otto A. Schramm, Past Presidents of our local Aerie, plenty of entertainment was at hand, which was presented through the courtesy of Max Stern, 240 Montgomery street, San Francisco, and the Castro Street Theatre, San Francisco. Some of the acts presented were Crawford's Hawaiian Musicians, Earl Clark, the Dark Town Stepper, Harry Anderson in songs, Ray Kremer, the story teller, and many others.

The evening was enjoyed by all present, and it might be added was the biggest affair ever staged in the history of the Aerie.

ENTERTAINS AT DINNER PARTY

Mrs. Helena O'Connor entertained at an elaborate dinner party last Tuesday evening, at her home on Evergreen avenue, in honor of Miss Cora Gaspidone and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Edward Sullivan, who are leaving this week for a six months' trip to Europe. The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion with roses and evergreens. In the center of the dining room table was a ship about two feet long, made entirely of pink and white baby roses and forget-menots, resting on a long mirror partly hidden by green moss. The table favors were carried out in the same color scheme. There was a life-saver, marked "Bon Voyage," tied with pink and white ribbon to each of the guests' favors. Mr. Joseph, a friend, was the artist.

Among those who enjoyed the dinner and gave many toasts and best wishes to the guests of honor were: The Misses Audrey Diamond, Tessie O'Connor, Cora Gaspidone, Margie O'Connor, Jewell Stewart, Messrs. Louie Ehling, Louis Canepa, and Mr. Joseph; Mr. and Mrs. John O'Connor, of Oakland, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Wall, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Sullivan, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fricke and the hostess, Mrs. H. O'Connor.

After the dinner a number of friends assembled at the O'Connor home and gave the guests of honor a farewell surprise party, which lasted until early morning. Both the guests received beautiful frienship gifts.

PERPETUAL HELP NOVENA AT ST. MAXIMUS CHURCH

Friday, June 8, will mark the opening day of a Solemn Novena to be held in St. Maximus church, Wellington avenue and Mission street. The Novena will be celebrated by way of preparation for the feast of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, Sunday, June 17.

The Redemptorist missionaries, Father Sutton of Oakland, and Father Gangell of Whittier, California, will conduct the services.

Just one year has elapsed since the establishing in St. Maximus church of the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of Perpetual Help. To mark the establishing of the Archconfraternity, a solemn Novena was conducted at the time—a Novena which daily brought hundreds to kneel and pray at Our Lady's shrine. The trusting prayers of Our Lady's clients during that Novena were richly rewarded, for the favors received during those days of grace numbered, in the records of the Archconfraternity, 1,323.

This year's Novena is sure to eclipse the Novena of 1927. New faces will come to look upon the sweet features of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, and, reading there the ever old yet new story of Mary's power and love, will take up the burdens of life with renewed courage and strength. Old faces that have gazed upon those features again and again, will come to ponder anew and assure themselves anew of our Mother's never-failing care and protection. And one and all will leave with hearts afire with holy zeal to spread broadcast the glad tidings of Mary's glories and all-embracing love of her mother-heart.

To one and all the clients of Our Blessed Mother, members of the Archconfraternity as well as nonmembers, the Fathers of St. Maximus extend a cordial invitation to make the Novena to be given by the Redemptorist Fathers Sutton and Grangell. Novena services will be held every afternoon at 3 o'clock and every evening at 8 o'clock. Both afternoon and evening services will consist of reading of petitions and thanksgivings, prayers of the Novena, blessing of the sick, sermon, and benediction of the most blessed sacrament. Cars 14, 18 and 26 will bring one to Wellington avenue within a few steps of the church.

COUNTY PLANNING COMMISSION BEING STUDIED BY BOARD

A county planning commission for San Mateo county was endorsed by the board of supervisors at its regular meeting in Redwood City last Monday, but whether the supervisors will act as the planning board or whether a commission, consisting of six persons, will be appointed, is a matter to be brought up at the next regular meeting of the board.

Fred H. Drake, president of the San Mateo county chamber of commerce, appeared before the board and cited the reasons why the board of supervisors should act as the county planning commission, holding meetings once a month. He said that a planning commission if decided upon, would consist of six persons, who would probably not be well versed on city planning. He declared that it would be a duplication of effort for an appointed commission, which would have no authority to pass upon matters, to argue some proposition for several months and then have to take the matter before the board of supervisors for an official sanction and lose a great deal of time in convincing the board that the particular proposal should be adopted. He also said that the commissioners would probably be enthusiastic at the first meeting, but would finally come to the point where there would not be enough of them attend to create a quorum.

These commissioners would not be paid milage, he said, and consequently it would not be worth their time to leave their respective businesses to go to the meetings. Supervisor Hickey agreed with him, but Supervisor Poole did not. He was in favor of appointing commissioners.

Drake intimated that the first thing to be taken up by the planning commission would be to co-operate with San Francisco in securing Hetch-Hetchy water from that county at a low cost.

The board resolved that the streets of a certain section of Ravenswood should be given titles and widened to 60 feet, with the exception of one block on Euclid street. It was brought out that a school building is on this block and if the street were widened it would mean that the building would be only 6 inches from the street. If the majority of the residents of this block permit, a petition favoring the widening, the board will probably include this block in the resolutions at the next meeting. These streets were declared public by the board in order that the water system might include them in laying the pipes.

A petition signed by residents of the Homestead district in San Mateo asked the county to pay the city of San Mateo the money collected in taxes for a library in the Homestead addition, because since the district is a part of San Mateo, the new library in that city may be used by them. The matter was referred to the district attorney.

The Federal Construction company presented a petition for another spur track at Millbrae. Because this track would cross a county road, it was necessary to lay the matter on the shelf until the next meeting.

A petition from the Beresford Sanitary board for sewers in that community was referred to the county engineer.

The Lomita Park Developement Association sent a letter asking the board what had been done to abate the mosquito nuisance in that vicinity. It will be referred to the Three Cities Mosquito Abatement district.

Soft drink permits were granted to C. Mang, J. G. Cook and Julias A. Lopas.

W. F. Jamison sent a petition asking that a certain private railroad crossing in the Marina Vista district at Millbrae be done away with, as it is a dangerous place for school children to be crossing.

Nelson, Mrss. M. Rampe, Mrs. M. Appleton, Mrs. A. Devlin, Mrs. K. Natusch, Mrs. A. Smith, Mrs. V. Husted, Mrs. J. Headvall, Miss M. Nelson, Miss M. Welch, Miss M. Twesten, Miss A. Twesten.

OCEAN SHORE ROAD TO BE MOST SCENIC IN UNITED STATES

A step was taken recently which is regarded as presaging the early commencement of construction of the proposed Ocean Shore highway south from San Francisco, when Clyde Healy, assistant city engineer, was appointed to make a complete survey of the more difficult portions of the proposed new road. These points include the great sweep of the road around Pedro Point in San Mateo county and at Waddell Beach in Santa Curz county.

Both of these sections are regarded as great obstacles in the construction of the road, but it is anticipated that these difficulties can be overcome, and for that reason Healy was commissioned to make a complete study of the situation.

The Ocean Shore highway when completed will form one of the most scenic roads in the entire United States. It is proposed to so construct the highway that throughout its entire length it will be within sight and hearing of the Pacific ocean from San Francisco to Santa Cruz and the Mexican border below San Diego.

The construction of such a highway has been proposed for more than twenty years. When the now defunct Ocean Shore Railway was first projected it was proposed to build it along a line that would be within sight of the ocean all the way from San Francisco to Santa Cruz. This railway was built, but was abandoned and torn up immediately after the close of the World war in 1919.

The coming of the automobile into almost universal use hit the railway hard and its ultimate failure and abandonment was the result of its greatly reduced revenues from passenger and freight traffic due to the introduction of the passenger automobile and the freight truck.

In the construction of the new Ocean Shore highway, it is proposed to utilize the old, abandoned right-of-way of the railway, since most of the grading has been done. The railway right-of-way swung around Pedro Point and there much of the old roadbed is still in existence but needing considerable work to bring it back into good condition.

At Waddell Beach, in Santa Cruz county, the old right-of-way was only a few feet above the wash of the waves, and here some difficulty in the construction of the new road is anticipated. This section, it is declared, was always a source of trouble to the old Ocean Shore Railway, due to its tracks being completely washed away at times.

The construction of this proposed highway dates back to a meeting of the Santa Cruz board of supervisors on October 6, 1926, when a resolution calling for the formation of a joint highway district embracing the three counties of Santa Cruz, San Mateo and San Francisco was adopted.

This resolution was drawn up by Ben Blow, field secretary of the National Automobile Club, and called upon the club to be the means of bringing about the organization of the three-county highway district.

This was accomplished recently when the district was formed and the three counties agreed to finance the construction program in the following percentages: San Francisco, 55 per cent, San Mateo, 30 per cent, and Santa Cruz, 15 per cent. Supervisor Andrew J. Gallagher of San Francisco is chairman of the district.

It is pointed out that the construction of the proposed hoghway will eliminate Pedro Mountain with its steep grades and many sharp curves. By doing this and eliminating other inland stretches, it will shorten the distance between San Francisco and Santa Cruz by ten miles.

It is declared that a material result of the proposed highway will be the increase in agriculture in the Half Moon Bay district, which is now regarded as rather backward, owing to the difficulty of rapid transportation, due to the high mountain ranges intervening to the east to connect with the Peninsula highway and to the north over Pedro Mountain of the Montara range.

Another result will be, it is estimated, that the distance from San Francisco to the city-owned Sharp Park at Salada Beach will be greatly reduced. This park is now being developed by John McLaren, who already has planted more than 100,000 young trees and has made other improvements.

Also it is pointed out that it will give to San Francisco at least five miles more of beach area when the road shall have been constructed through Fort Funston, just south of Fleishacker pool. Passage through this military reservation, it is anticipated, will be granted by the United States government.

How absurd, you say. But not so at all. Her Electric Range with its automatic time and temperature controls is doing the cooking automatically, while she is away from the kitchen.

The dinner placed in the cold oven at one o'clock starts to cook at four. The temperature control keeps the oven heat just right. The current will turn off at six. All this is done electrically, while she is playing cards, motoring or shopping.

Would you like to have the meals cooked while you're away? Over thirty thousand California women let the Electric Range do this for them. Our representative will gladly tell you about the modern electrical way of cooking.

ETHEL BARRYMORE COMING TO THE CURRAN THEATRE IN "THE CONSTANT WIFE"

The appearance of Ethel Barrymore in "The Constant Wife," which comes to the Curran Theatre, San Francisco, for a limited engagement beginning Monday night, May 28, will give local audiences an opportunity to see this most popular American actress in one of the happiest roles of her career. The combination of Gilbert Miller's management and a smart new comedy from the pen of the English playwright and novelist, W. Somerset Maugham, has proven such a fortunate one that Miss Barrymore, if she so desired, could probably go on playing "The Constant Wife" indefinitely.

Many letters and queries from members of her large audiences at the Maxine Elliott Theatre, New York, and the Sam H. Harris Theatre, Chicago, during her long runs, have convinced Miss Barrymore that the particular problem of her new play has intrigued all classes of playgoers. The marked curiosity concerning the solution of the predicament at once pathetic and comic, seems to have added as much to the wide appeal of the comedy as the brilliant witticisms with which it is sprinkled, and the searching comment on modern marriage inherent in its amazing situations.

While W. Somerset Maugham has been widely known for many plays which have had success in America, he is perhaps most often remembered in connection with "The Circle," a brilliant comedy of marriage, and his part in the dramatic version of "Rain," which was based on one of his short stories. On only one occasion before the present play has he provided a role for Miss Barrymore whose talents for comedy seem so adroitly fitted to his own dialogue and point of view. That was "Lady Frederick," which the star played under the management of Charles Frohman several years ago.

With Miss Barrymore in "The Constant Wife" will be the same expert cast which has made the comedy one of the reigning successes of the past two seasons. Prominent among them are Kenneth Hunter, Frank Conroy, James Jolley, Cora Wtherspoon, Gertrude Bryan, Alice John and Jeannette Sherwin.

Matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday.

A TRIBUTE TO COUNTRY PRESS

"The smaller newspapers of the country are the most important newspapers, and incidentally, in proportion to their circulation, their advertising results are the biggest, and their advertising rates are the smallest in the country. They are read through from end to end. Every copy of circulation means an entire family, not a family that lives in one room with a can-opener, but a family that owns its own house, and land around it, at least ninety times out of a hundred; a family that buys everything, from the roof on the house to the cement on the cellar floor; from the hat on mother's head to the shoes on the boys' feet. The service that their publishers render to the public is, in my opinion, the most important service rendered by any class of citizens in the Unitd States. The country editors are distributors of information; they reach the minds of the boys that leave the farms, and they are the nation's mental police force," says Arthur Brisbane.

After half a century in the publication of newspapers, daily and weekly, the writer can indorse the opinion of Arthur Brisbane that the country newspaper is read from end to end, and the advertisements are of special interest. Where a hundred read all that is in the home weekly, only one in that hundred peruse all that is in the big city daily paper that comes to them. Large foreign advertisers are also becoming cognizant of the fact that space in the weekly and smaller city dailies is of real value to them. That they can gain more at less cost, at the same time securing as much combined circulation with a certainty that their advertisements will be read by all.—Woodburn, Oregon, Weekly Independent, April 12.

ANOTHER GREAT WEEK AT THE STATE THEATRE

A number of high class pictures have been booked for appearance at the State Theatre for the coming week. On Saturday two splendid pictures will be presented, Virginia Bradford and Frank Marion in "The Wreck of the Hesperus," and Janet Gaynor and Glenn Tyron in "Two Girls Wanted." There will be a special kiddie matinee. On Sunday, another double feature bill, Virginia Brown Faire and Rin-Tin-Tin in "Tracked by the Police," and Red Grange in "Racing Romeo." Next Tuesday and Wednesday, Ronald Colman and Virginia Banky in "The Magic Flame. There will be a continuous show on May 30, Decoration day, the feature picture being "The Dress Parade," in which William Boyd and Bessie Love are featured. On Thursday, Natalie Kingston and Milton Sills in "The Silent Lover," while "The Devil Dancer" will be presented on Friday. Gilda Gray and Clive Brook have the leading roles in this production.

HENRY FORD INCREASES HIS TELEPHONE PLANT

The Ford plant has been equipped with the latest developement in private branch exchange equipment. The old 600 line private branch exchange board in the River Rouge Plant has given way to a new 1,200 line board which has been installed in the Administration Building overlooking the mammoth Ford enterprises. This new office now links three other Ford plants and the Ford Hospital.

OSTRACIZE RECKLESS DRIVERS

An authority on traffic problems says:

"Every traffic accident is a symptom of something wrong. Something wrong with the driver, the pedestrian, the street or highway, the control system, the vehicle, the ordinance, the police department, or the community. In cities, two-thirds of the victims of fatal motor vehicle accidents are pedestrians. Our greatest problems is to define clearly the proper use of streets by vehicles and by pedestrians and the obligations of each to the other."

He urges "an organized campaign of ostracism of the motorist who endangers self and every one through non-observance of traffic signals, boulevard stop signs and the like, and who is generally the same fellow that pulls across the crosswalk, makes elderly people jump out of his way, splashes mud on pedestrians and generally behaves himself like a hog."

He says public officials promote violation of traffic signals, when they put signals "at places where they are not needed, run them at times when they are not needed or run them on too long a cycle."

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

"Bigger and better" automobile plates for California in 1929, brobably orange numbers on a black background, were decided upon by Frank G. Snook, chief of the state division of motor vehicles.

California will have a state fire prevention and suppression force of fifty men in the field by June 1 and most of the rangers and other forestry officials are already on duty. State Forester M. B. Pratt announced a few days ago.

Death has claimed Kern county's oldest native born resident, an Indian woman whose span of life there has passed the century mark. She was born in the canyon. The Indian woman's exact age is unknown, but her nephew, Chief Juan Lozada, says she was well over 100 years and that many believed her to be 127 years of age Although she was the mother of several children, Mrs. Mendez survived all of them.

Journalese, the language of newspapermen, is invading the public schools. Not only will California's new series of language books employ cartoons suggestive of comic strips to enliven the pages, but the text matter itself will have a distinct newspaper flavor. There will be "lead" paragraphs such as are used in newspaper stories. Blackface type will be generously employed.

California's state department of public health a few days ago indulged in "baby talk" and there were 84,334 babies to talk about. That many brand new infants came into California homes during the last year, approximately 20 to every 1,000 persons in the state population. The baby total showed an increase of 1,962 over that of 1926. And, more than that, the infant mortality rate for the year was kept down to 62.5 per 1,000 live births, the lowest in the history of California, according to the department's official vital statistics made public.

The present forty-mile speed limit on California highways as enforced by the state division of motor vehicles will be continued despite the ruling by a Fresno justice that fifty miles an hour is legal under certain conditions. This is the attitude of Frank G. Snook, chief of the state motor vehicles department. The interpretation the Fresno justice places on the motor vehicle act does not cause the whole superstructure of speed legislation to tumble down, Snook says. Furthermore, he does not believe that the Fresno decision is of sufficient consequence to be appealed to a higher court.

Plans for a $40,000,000 initiative bond act to build the Westside highway through the San Joaquin Valley, ultimately providing a new San Francisco-Los Angeles connection, were disclosed last week before Governor Young. And Governor Young said that he "seriously doubted" whether the people of California will favor return to the bond issue method of financing road building. The proposed highway, as explained by W. R. McKay of Hanford, state crime commission member, and other backers of the plan would be approximately 400 miles long, extending between Tracy and Filmore.

Dan Cupid took a punch right on the "button" from California's gin marriage law last year, marriages dropping off by 3,177 during 1927. This is shown by official figures announced by the state department of public health. Last year's marriage total was actually running ahead of 1926 until the law requiring a three-day declaration of marriage became effective, on July 29th. But during the closing five months of the year Cupid's couplings showed a decrease of approximately 5,000. For the year, marriages totaled 53,487 for a rate of 12.6 per thousand of population, against 56,664 marriages and a rate of 13.7 in 1926. There were 19,719 weddings in the state during the last five months of the year, as compared with 24,671 during the same period of 1926.

San Francisco not only "knows how" educationally, but she has the dollars to back up her knowledge. The bay city has a greater wealth per pupil in the elementary and high schools than any other population center in California. Los Angeles county is the richest in the state, but statistical distribution of wealth on a per capita basis among public school children places San Francisco far ahead of either the Los Angeles area or the East Bay district. The state department of education recently announced "true wealth per pupil" in the three big counties as follows: elementary schools—San Francisco, $34,413.53; Los Angeles, $30,207.30; Alameda, $19,140.87. High schools—San Francisco, $124,969.99; Los Angeles, $96,539.09; Alameda, $55,907.98.

California's bill for school books is experiencing a shrinkage, due to the work of the state printing office in their production, that the citizenry is going to learn of with much satisfaction. A cut of approximately 66 2-3 per cent in costs is not to be overlooked, with so many other places in which the saving can be utilized The office has just completed the printing of 25,416 copies of arithmetic books No. 1, at an average cost of 21 cents, the total being $5,336. At the publishers' quoted prices, these books would have cost the state more than $15,000.

Degrees and certificates of garduation were granted 2,282 students at the University of California at the sixty-fifth annual commencement exercises held in the Memorial Stadium at Berkeley recently.

June 1 is the date set by the Boeing Air Transport, Inc., on which they will begin operation of new twelve-passenger planes between San Francisco and Sacramento. Three planes will go into service then and twelve more are planned to be put into service as soon as the need for them develops. This announcement was made recently by Maurice M. Smith, of the Boeing traffic department, before the Sacramento Ad Club.

California's total estimated daily average crude oil production increased 600 barrels during the week ended May 12, figures released by the American Petroleum Institute show. The total estimated daily average crude oil production for the week of the report was 622,900 barrels, compared with 622,300 barrels for the week ended May 5.

Stockton will be the next attraction for cruising enthusiasts following the Isleton festival of last week-end. The Stockton Water Carnival will be held May 26 and 27, in celebration of the completion of the valley's victory in its fight for a deep-water channel to the sea. An important feature of the affair will, of course, be races in the various outboard divisions. It is expected that a majority of the boats entered for the Isleton contests will be taken down the San Joaquin for the competition this week.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been lost to investors in the state in stock through activities of so-called loan and discount companies, according to the State Corporation Department a few days ago after a six week investigation into activities of such companies which, it is alleged, have been loaning from 50 to 80 cents on the dollar to holders of stocks. There are twenty-seven such concerns under investigation in the state.

Clara Phillips must spend five more years inside prison walls before she is eligible to parole. A formal ruling by Deputy Attorney General Charles A. Wetmore Jr. last week blasted the hammer murderess' hope of leaving San Quentin this year. She had pinned her hopes to the 1927 law fixing new penalties for second degree murder and setting the minimum term for second degree murder at five years. In an effort to apply the provisions of the 1927 law to prisoners convicted prior to that date, the Legislature made the act retroactive. Clara Phillips has served five years of her sentence, and under the new law would be eligible for parole.

More than half the 4,288 population or San Quentin prison is made up of young men below thirty years of age, a survey of statistics shows. There are 2,297, the figures show. Average age of male prisoners is 32 years; that of females 35. In spite of the fact that scores of men have been sent out on parole since January 1, the population has increased by 446 since that date. White prisoners predominate in both male and female sections, with negroes second. There are 3,538 white prisoners, 307 negroes, 56 Chinese, 22 Japanese, 31 Indians, 6 Hawaiians, 23 Filipinos and and 13 Hindus.

The statewide co-operative fight of Californians to secure federal money for adquately financing forest experimental work as a basis of conserving and developing the forests, one of California's greatest natural resources, has been won with the passage of the McNary-McSweeney forestry research bill in the House of Representatives. The passage of this bill by the House of Representatives marks the close of the legislative cycle of the bill, and the President's signature is definitely assured, due to the fact that he clear-listed the bill before it was passed by the Senate and House committees and the Senate. This forestry research bill gives to California the sum of $190,000 of federal money annually for the work of the California Forest Experiment Station.

President Coolidge's approval of the flood control bill last week means a saving of approximately $23,000,000 to northern California land owners, according to a statement issued by Stephens W. Downey, attorney for the state reclamation board. Levies and other works of the Sacramento valley flood control projects involve a total cost of $51,000,000, toward which, up to this time, Downey said the federal and state governments have been contributing approximately 10 per cent each, the other 80 per cent remaining a charge against the land owners. The California provisions of the new federal flood control bill were sponsored by Congressman Charles F. Curry of Sacramento along the lines of the California debris commission report of 1925, and pledge the federal government, Downey said, to one-third participation in the $51,000,000 cost.

One of California's greatest killers, the grade crossing, will be attacked shortly, when active campaigning begins for passage of the grade crosisng bond act, authorizing $10,000,000 bonds, to be matched by an equal amount from the railroads. Senator Roy Fellom of San Francisco is author of the act. "There were 194 persons killed and 763 injured in 1,740 grade crossing accidents during 1927," said Fellom. "These figures from the state railroad commission survey show an increase of nearly 10 per cent over 1926.

FRUIT JUICES

An excellent dessert is made from fruit juices either fresh or canned and thickened with the addition of gelatin, combined with cream. Berries which are still good but too soft to serve whole, may have the juice squeezed out and one tablespoonful of gelatin added for each cupful of juice, which when allowed to stand in a cool place for several hours will stiffen nicely. To this jelly as it begins to set, fold in a cupful of whipped cream and the whites of two eggs beaten stiff. Two cupfuls of cream will take the place of the eggs.

Orange Souffle.—Take one-half of a package of lemon gelatin dissolved in one-third of a cupful of boiling water, add the well-beaten yolks of three eggs, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, and cook until smooth over hot water; cool and add one cupful of orange pulp cut into small bits, fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites and one-half cupful of thick cream beaten stiff. Pour into a mold and chill. Serve with whipped cream and garnish with quarters of oranges or fresh strawberries.

Pudding.—Beat the yolks of three eggs and one-half cupful of sugar until well mixed; add one-fourth teaspoonful of salt and a pint of scalded milk. Cook over hot water until the mixture coats the spoon and stir in one and one-half tablespoonfuls of gelatin which has been softened in one-third of a cupful of cold water. Place sliced peaches, sliced cake and a sprinkling of nuts in the dish in which it is to be served. Pour over the custard and place in ice chest until firm and cold. Dot with spoonfuls of whipped cream or with a meringue, cooked over hot water.

During the summer, or in fact any season, it is a good custom to have a bowl of some jelly like lemon or pineapple ready for a quick dessert or salad. An apple finely diced, with a bit of tender celery and a spoonful or two of nice lemon jelly, a sprinkling of fresh coconut which, too, is kept on hand, makes a nice salad. For dessert the jelly with sliced peaches and cream with a coconut or other chopped nuts. There are so many dishes one may prepare if supplied with the jelly all made.

Delectable Dishes.

When the children refuse to eat the wholesome spinach try giving it to them with a few chopped raisins and the same amount of nuts. Season the hot cooked vegetable with plenty of butter and as much salt and pepper as is palatable, add the raisins, a half cupful of nuts and enough lemon juice to make it slightly acid. They will like it and call for more.

Gateaux Robert.—Cream three-fourths of a cupful of butter, add two cupfuls of sugar, then one cupful milk and two and one-half cupfuls of flour sifted with three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, adding the milk and flour alternately; fold in the whites of five eggs beaten stiff and add one teaspoonful of almond extract. Bake in two large square tins, not too brown. turn out and cool; spread the first layer with a thick marshmallow icing to which have been added a half-dozen maroons (French chestnuts candied) cut into thin slices. Place the other layer over this and cover with an icing of strong coffee with confectioners' sugar. When the icing is dry melt unsweetened chocolate over water and with a brush or pointed spoon cover the cake with a tracery of the chocolate. Prepare the marshmallow frosting as follows:

Place one and one-half cupfuls of sugar and one-half cupful of water with one-eighth teaspoonful of cream of tartar over the fire and boil until it spins a long thread. Cut up and add one-half dozen marshmallows and pour in a fine stream over the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs, beating the mixture all the time. Flavor with vanilla and almond extract.

Ginger Custards.—Scald two cupfuls of milk, add three beaten eggs one-fourth cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of ginger sirup and one-fourth cupful of preserved ginger pears cut into small pieces, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt. Pour into buttered cups and bake in a pan of water until the custard is firm. Dates with vanilla or stewed prunes may take the place of the ginger.

When fresh coconuts are to be obtained, save the milk and grate the nut. When making icing for cake use the powdered sugar, a little of the coconut milk and the fresh grated nut Thick cream may be used instead of the milk if it is not at hand.

MRS. YELLOW CAT

"Some people," Tiger Cat said to himself, "need all sorts of foolish timepieces, such as clocks and watches.

"To me that is utterly foolish.

"Children are often just as foolish. They keep asking the time. They want to know if it is time for dinner.

"Now I know when it is meal time. They don't have to look at their watches or their clocks in order to tell me."

"You must be very smart," said Mrs. Cook, the yellow cat.

house as Tiger Cat, and she belonged to the cook.

That was why she had been given her name.

"I can tell when it is mealtime, for I can smell the food cooking," said the yellow cat.

"I am always upstairs in the house," said Tiger Cat, "when it is mealtime, but just as the meal is about to be served I know it and I come down the stairs."

So the two cats talked, but one day when he went downstairs for dinner he didn't see Mrs. Yellow Cat.

There was no cat at all—no Mrs. Yellow Cat in her usual place by the stove.

But after dinner he found the reason why.

Up in a wardrobe, in the cook's room, sat Mrs. Yellow Cat blinking happily as she gazed upon her family of little baby kittens!

They were more important than dinner.

Invisible Ink

Lemon juice is a wonderful ink, though you may have never thought of it as a writing fluid. It is wonderful because after you have written with it the sheet of paper is perfectly blank and the writing is invisible. Here is the method: Merely squeeze some juice from a lemon and then dip into it with a perfectly clean pen. Then write as you would with ordinary ink.

But if the writing is invisible the juice is worthless, you say? It would be but for this fact: When you heat the paper over a candle or over a hot stove, being careful not to burn it, the writing will slowly appear in a deep brown color. Now you have the materials for a game that may mystify your friends.

Try this: Write some messages, such as fortunes, on small pieces of paper about three inches square, using your lemon juice for ink. Do not tell your friends about it. Now have your friends write their names and date of birth with pencil on one of the pieces, which you give to each of them, telling them they will have their fortunes told.

They see there is nothing else on the paper. As you hold each sheet over a candle flame they will be very much surprised at the appearance of the message. To add to the mystery you might place these papers into a hot oven instead of using the candle flame as a source of heat.

Size of New Sister

Mary had come home from school and announced that a new baby had arrived in the home of her friend, Marjory. Jeannette, aged six, had not heard the conversation, and a little later some one said: "Jeannette, did you know Marjory has a new sister?"

"No," and then, after a moment of deep thought, during which we thought the mysteries of the universe were racing through her brain, "What size?"

Famous Flyer Proved Himself "Good Sport"

A Boston woman teacher told this one about Commander Richard Evelyn Byrd:

When the aviator had been invited to dine at a girls' school before his lecture, the principal called all the seniors together and then told them:

"Commander Byrd is a southern gentleman. I want you to take particular pains with your manners. Also I do not want you to make a hole in your potatoes and put your gravy in it at dinner this evening."

As the pretty young things went into the dining room, one of them pulled the sleve of the aviator's tunic and whispered, "Do us a favor?"

Mr. Byrd smilingly nodded his consent, and she whispered:

"Then make a hole in your potatoes and put your gravy into it."

He nodded again, and when the gravy was passed he solemnly pressed down the gravy ladle in the center of his potatoes and filled the hole with the rich, brown sauce.

For a second there was a silence of astonishment. Then the favor-seeker giggled and the game was up.

Death Thwarts Discovery

Dr. Sidney Rawson Watson, whose death attracted world-wide attention, was believed by his friends to have been on the eve of a great discovery when he was killed while experimenting on himself with new gas. He was found dead in his study wearing a gas mask. Beside him was the latest apparatus for administering gas. A daring experimenter with anesthetics, he often experimented on himself, and he told his friends that he was trying to invent a mixture of gas and oxygen under which a person might be conscious of everything except pain.

Little Martha was much disappointed when she heard that the camping trip that had been planned by her group of girl scouts had been postponed because some of the girls had got ptomaine poisoning on a hike the week before. PLIGHT OF THE AGED

If it were possible to bring home to the young and middle-aged the pitiful condition of a large percentage of all old people, it might be easier to inculcate habits of thrift.

One of the saddest things imaginable is to see aged persons who are dependent upon charity for the bare necessities of life. About 80,000 are in the poor houses of the United States, but the number who are supported in various ways outside of these institutions is many times as large. It has been estimated that about 80 per cent of all persons more than 65 years of age are dependent to some extent upon the charity of relatives or others.

Many of these have seen prosperous days, but through wastefulness, bad investments, sickness, accidents or other misfortunes have been reduced to their present plight.

Unfortunately the examples of old-age poverty which may be seen on every hand are ignored by the very ones who will experience a similar situation in their later years.

DEPEW'S FIRST FEE

Many anecdotes are being revived concerning the career of Chauncey M. Depew, famed railroad president and after-dinner speaker, who died recently at the age of ninety-four. His reputation as a story teller was world-wide, and it was a marvel to his friends that a busy business man could find time to acquire such a fund of rare humor. Some of his best jokes were told on himself. The story of his first fee as a lawyer is one of them.

Shortly after he had graduated from Yale in 1858, he began the practice of law in his home town, Peekskill, N. Y. His first client was a prosperous farmer who wanted an opinion on a rather complicated matter. Depew gave the case diligent study and gave the farmer his advice. Asked what his fee was, Depew said it would be five dollars, to which the farmer replied: "A dollar and seventy-five cents is enough for a young lawyer like you." The fee was accepted, but the farmer, being not quite satisfied, paid an eminent New York lawyer $500 for an opinion on the matter, receiving the same advice Depew had given him for $1.75.

In later life Mr. Depew said: "In subsequent years I have received several very large retainers, but none of them gave me so much satisfaction as that dollar and seventy-five cents, which I had actually earned after being so long dependent on my father."

The Topeka Journal asserts that "pretty colored sandals are now being worn on the feet." If they were being worn on the hands or head, the Journal would probably have said so.

REAL SPORTSMANSHIP

In these days of intense rivalry among competitors in athletic contests, which often leads to charges of unfairness and causes bitter feuds among teams and their supporters, the sportsmanlike conduct of several teams in the recent national high school basketball tournament is deserving of special notice.

The national championship trophy was won by the Ashland, Kentucky, team, which played throughout the entire tournament without having a single personal foul charged against them, a record for real sportsmanship perhaps never equaled in such a series of hard-fought games.

In the same tournament the team from the little mountain school at Carr Creek, Kentucky, defeated the able five from Bristol, Connecticut. So impressed were the Bristol players with the clean game of their victorious opponents that they presented each Carr Creek member with a watch, inscribed with congratulatory good wishes.

The chivalrous records of these teams merit the very highest praise, and sets a fine example for participants in all branches of competitive sport. This country has nothing to fear when it has such fine young citizens.

WOMEN AS POLICE

A world survey of conditions with respect to the welfare of women and children recently made under the auspices of the League of Nations discloses that in eighteen countries women are employed to a greater or less extent as police.

The largest number are employed in the United States, with Great Britain and Argentina following. Satisfaction over the results obtained through the work of policewomen is expressed by all countries reporting, except South Africa, where women police formerly used in Cape Town have been discontinued.

Not all the countries which include women on the police roster use them for making arrests, however, as a great many are detailed to duty only as matrons or for investigation work.

The employment of women in this and other branches of public service appears to be steadily increasing, and the spread of the idea, particularly in countries in which women have the ballot, is an indication that in time very few human activities will be closed to them.

BOOSTING SALARIES

Commenting on the action of legislators who raise their own salaries, the Ottawa Journal observes that these gentlemen have an advantage over other employees of the governmnt or those of private concerns.

The legislatures of Saskatchewan and Quebec provinces have recently placed an increased value on their own services, but it is pointed out that they are only following the example of the Dominion parliament in the matter, as that body a few years ago jumped members' pay from $2,500 to $4,000. The United States Congress was even more liberal with itself in its last salary boost from $7,500 to $10,000 a year, and a Senator recently declared that the only time he had ever seen every Senator in his seat was the day the bill was passed.

In Canada, it is said that while the increase of salaries by parliament caused considerable criticism at the time, only one member fought against it—and he was defeated for re-election.

A WORLD-WIDE CLOCK

With a view to greater uniformity of time throughout the world, a master clock to serve all countries has been proposed by Professor Korn, German scientist.

While it is possible at present to keep clocks in different countries very closely synchronized, a difference of a fifth of a second or more is common. Professor Korn proposes one great master clock, broadcasting time signals by radio throughout the world, whereby clocks so corrected would not vary more than two-thousandth of a second. The adoption of the proposed plan would be another triumph for science, but few require time accuracy carried to such a fine point. Most of us think we are doing pretty well if we keep our engagements within fifteen minutes of the time scheduled, unless we have to catch a train.

PRODUCE SHIPMENTS

It is somewhat surprising to know how wide is the territory from which large cities of the country draw their food supplies, particularly vegetables. A few illustrations will show how the expense of transportation must greatly increase the price of farm and garden products to the ultimate consumer.

White potatoes are shipped to Chicago from no less than thirty-seven states, to Indianapolis from thirty-three, to Cleveland from thirty-two, and to Birmingham from thirty-one states. Practically all the larger cities of the middle west receive potatoes from more than twenty states, some being shipped by rail a distance of 2,500 miles.

New York receives apples from twenty-three states, the maximum haul being 3,150 miles; potatoes from twenty-one states, lettuce, canteloupes and onions from seventeen states, and tomatoes and peaches from thirteen states. Chicago's apple supply comes from twenty-five states, cabbage from twenty-three states, onions from twenty states, peaches from nineteen states, tomatoes from seventeen states, strawberries and sweet potatoes from sixteen states, and canteloupes from fourteen states.

While the long haul of early vegetables is due largely to the varying climate of different sections of the United States, it seems that a system of marketing might be developed which would eliminate a considerable part of the transportation charges involved in getting these products to the consumer.

MOTHER'S DAY EXERCISES AT R. S. THORNTON SCHOOL

Mother's day exercises by the pupils of the R. S. Thornton primary school of Colma, under the direction of their teachers, took place Wednesday afternoon. The children participating were all under ten years of age and quite surprised their parents and friends by acquitting themselves in a way truly admirable. The following program was rendered:

"Star Spangled Banner."

Recitation, "O Flag of Our Hearts," First Grade.

Song, "Mother's Day," School.

Song, "The Yellow Jacket," Gino Mibelli.

Piano Solo, Hazel Friend.

Songs, "Moonlit Waters," "Sailin' On," Girls of the Third and Fourth Grades.

Son, "Hother Machree," School.

Song, "Santa Lucia," Orlando Martini.

Recitation, "Only One Mother," First Grade.

Song, "I Love My Mama Best of All," Kindergarten and First Grade.

Song, "Mother of Mine," School.

Miss Virginia Miller added materially to the afternoon's enjoyment by contributing several piano selections. Miss Miller is a sister of Miss Elizabeth Miller, the kindergarten teacher of the R. S. Thornton school, and is a noted pianist often heard over the radio.

The program concluded with selections played by the school band, children of the kindergarten and First grade. This band of twenty-four little ones was taught by Miss Elizabeth Miller. Little Miss Anita Scvamaglia proved an able leader and the effect of the music rendered was quite novel and clever.

The class songs, so well given, were taught the children by Miss Mosconi, our district music teacher.

The entertainment was opened and closed with short talks by Prof. W. J. Savage, district superintendent, who always takes particular interest in the work of the very young children.

The exhibit of work done by the children of the school was highly praised by the parents and others present.

The teachers of the R. S. Thornton primary school are Mrs. Josephine T. Johnson, teacher in charge, Miss Genevieve Gannon, Mrs. Margaret Henderson and Miss Elizabeth Miller.

The annual invitational party given by the Girls' Club of Colma was held last Saturday evening in the Colma Community Center hall, on Dunk street. The hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion in greens intermingled with yellow marigolds. Several large Japanese parasols covered the ceiling, from which yellow paper streamers were draped to the side walls, making a very pretty effect.

Dancing was enjoyed throughout the evening by about 150 members and guests. Music for the dancing was furnished by Julius Schindler's orchestra. Delicious home made cake, punch and coffee were served to the guests during the evening.

FACTS ABOUT THE TELEPHONE

There are now eighteen telephones for every hundred persons residing in the state of Connecticut.

The average number of local and toll telephone calls in the state of Texas over the Bell System wires is now more than 4,500,000 per day.

In the seven years between 1920 and 1927 there was an increase of 22,033,000 telephone calls per day over the wires of the Bell System.

The plant investment for the Bell System totaled, at the beginning of the present year, $3,013,985,120, or $220.82 per single telephone.

Enough telephone wire to girdle the earth ten times will be added to the Bell telephone plant in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec in Canada during 1928.

Home runs are again listed among the items for which the demand is greater than the supply.

SIDELIGHTS

Alert Chicago police trailed Joseph McLaughlin, who was seen driving a car with one hand and holding a handkerchief over a crying child's mouth with the other. Thinking they had apprehended a bold kidnaper, they were preparing to land him in jail when he explained that the child was his 4-year-old daughter who had just had a tooth pulled.

In a recent baseball game Atlantic, Iowa, high school beat the Griswold team by the score of 109 to 0. Atlantic made 16 home runs, 6 triples and 23 doubles, one player making 5 home runs in 14 times at bat. At the end of the eighth inning the scorekeeper became exhausted and the game was called.

A Connecticut newspaper evidently assigned a sports reporter to cover a literary program. Works of Victor Hugo were discussed and the story said that one or the ladies present spoke on "The Halfback of Notre Dame."

Arthur Watson of Grimsby, England, is one individual whose face is his misfortune. Another fellow who looks like him is a crook, and Arthur has been put in jail five times for crimes committed by his "double."

Another of those hearty appetities has been reported from Mount Carmel, Ill., where a hobo is said to have consumed at one meal 17 sandwiches, 7 slices of bacon, 3 oyster stews, 2 cans of beans, 6 jelly rolls, 9 cups of coffee, 2 pints of milk and 6 glasses of water.

Lindbergh recently applied for a renewal of his commercial flying license and in answering the usual questionnaire he stated that he had made 7,800 flights, totalling 2,520 hours in the air in flying 200,000 miles, and had carried 7,000 passengers. Officials decided that he was qualified.

Six preachers in Staunton, Virginia, played volleyball against six policemen, on a wager, the terms of which were that if the preachers lost they would go to jail for an hour, and if the cops lost they were to go to church. Next Sunday the six limbs of the law occupied a pew and listened intently while volleyball player Rev. J. Lewis Gibbs expounded the gospel.

If by some miracle the crossed eyes of Ben Turpin, motion picture comedian, ever become straight, $100,000 will accrue to Mack Sennet, Turpin's producer. An insurance policy for that amount has been written, guaranteeing that the miracle will not happen.

Dr. A. S. Rosenbach, the world-famous collector of rare books, is Jewish and eats kosher food prepared in conformity to orthodox practices, which is not strange. Unusual, however, is the fact that his cook is an Irish Catholic.

When Alfred McGee, of Glenville, Alabama, died he made a request that he be buried near the highway, and that the farmers hauling their cotton crop to market would call the price in a loud voice. This has been done for the past forty-five years.

At Winchester, Virginia, a stout, well-dressed, but extremely dark-complexioned man appeared to be mingling too freely with the white folks at a celebration. A lady of the company invited him to depart. Later Governor Byrd apologized for the lady's rudeness to Mahmoud Samy Pasha, Egyptian minister to the United States.

Among recent arrivals from England were "Mr. and Mrs. John Robinson," a couple palpably traveling under fictitious names. No scandal or concealment of crime attended the circumstance, however. The couple simply wanted to be inconspicuous, they being better known as Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford.

John Pierpont Morgan, famed New York banker, recently returned from a European vacation and spent three days looking into matters which had accumulated during his absence. Then he set a good example in citizenship by serving on the Nassau county grand jury at Mineola.

Simon Rothschild, of New York, 100 years old, boasts of having retained all his mental faculties. He says: "My memory is so good that I can make the same mistakes today that I made fifty years ago."

By their modern dress women appear to have good taste—etc.

TRAVELERS' ASSURANCE

MODERN travelers demand the comforts and conveniences to which they are accustomed. Travelers' assurance is an important function of the telephone—especially the rapid, convenient and economical telephone service now available to nearby and distant points.

The telephone way is an easy way to take the trouble out of travel—for making advance arrangements and hotel reservations—keeping in touch with the folks at home—making social and business appointments. And in emergencies, the traveler is only as far from help as the nearest telephone.

The general reliance placed upon the telephone by modern and experienced travelers is in itself assurance that—

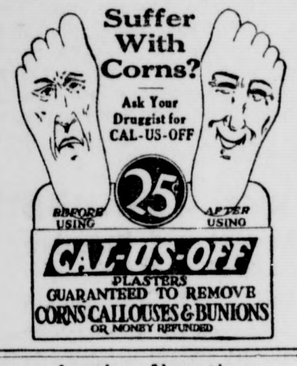
Cute in a Baby—Awful at Three —and it's Dangerous

by Ruth Brittain

Thumb sucking does look sweet in a baby, but it is disgusting in the three-year-old and sometimes it hangs on until fifteen or sixteen! The habit may cause an ill-formed mouth or induce adenoids; and it always interferes with digestion. Pinning the sleeve over the hand; attaching mittens, or putting on cardboard cuffs, which prevent bending the arms at the elbows, are some of the ways to stop the habit.

Another bad habit—irregularity in bowel action—is responsible for weak bowels and constipation in babies. Give the tiny bowels an opportunity to act at regular periods each day. If they don't act at first, a little Fletcher's Castoria will soon regulate them. Every mother should keep a bottle of it handy to use in case of colic, cholera, diarrhea, gas on stomach and bowels, constipation, loss of sleep, or when baby is cross and feverish. Its gentle influence over baby's system enables him to get full nourishment from his food, helps him gain, strengthens his bowels.

Castoria is purely vegetable and harmless—the recipe is on the wrapper. Physicians have prescribed it for over 30 years. With each package, you get a valuable book on Motherhood. Look for Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper so you'll get the genuine.



Lasting Negatives

It is certain that a motion picture negative will last at least thirty years, for there is in existence now the original picture of the inauguration of President McKinley in 1897, and from that negative perfectly good copies can be made today. There are motion pictures of all our Presidents since that time, carefully stored. There are wonderful pictures of the part we played in the World war, and of other recent events in our history. Scientists and film experts hazard the opinion that a roll of negative film, kept in a proper temperature and a certain degree of humidity, or moisture, might be preserved for 200 or 300 years, or perhaps indefinitely. But only time will answer the question accurately.

The Return of Anthony Trent

by

Wyndham Martyn

Copyright by Barse & Hopkins WNU Service

STORY FROM THE START

Anthony Trent returns to New York after nearly four years' absence. Once known as the master criminal, Trent is going straight. The purser accuses Trent of jumping overboard from the Poitlania at Liverpool, but is disappointed when Trent shows no surprise. He learns his friend, Capt. Frank Sutton, is in Sing Sing. At New York Trent is startled to find somebody occupying his house. The stranger is Sutton Campbell, the brother of his best friend, who is serving ten years in prison. Trent is asked by Campbell Sutton to force Payson Grant to a written confession, having crookedly obtained all of Captain Sutton's possessions and later married his wife.

"And I have looked upon him as one of my few friends!"

"He is your friend," the other said earnestly. "And it is because he thinks you are his friend that he expects you to do this. He has enormous faith in you. He remembers how you outwitted them all. To one so skilled as you, so resolute and highly trained, he believes it will be child's play. Have you thought what your success means to him?"

Trent sat with his elbows on his knees, his face buried in his hands. It was one of the bitter moments. He felt himself trapped. There was no reason to doubt Campbell Sutton's statements. And believing them, what escape was possible? Those good resolutions, founded not on fear, but a gradual spiritual rebirth, must be cast to the winds. He knew that Sutton, maddened by injustice and three years a convict, would be in no mood to listen to what would seem only poor excuses born of temerity.

"Well?" said Sutton after a long silence. "What is it to be?"

"You win," Trent answered listlessly.

"I shall expect to be consulted in what moves you take," Campbell Sutton said.

Trent allowed his growing dislike of the intruder to flame out. "Then you'll be disappointed," he snapped. "I'm forced into this thing and I'll do it my own way. I'm not in the habit of being dictated to by anyone. You are Captain Sutton's brother. I owe you nothing at all, yet you presume to command me to do this, or that, as though it were for you I have had to alter my whole plan of life."

"It is the same thing," Sutton's brother said carelessly.

"Emphatically it is not," Trent retorted, "and I shall tell Captain Sutton so when I see him."

"He doesn't want you to see him. We talked that over. Grant has a dread of what my brother may do; he has not forgotten those threats uttered in court. Without doubt he has his spies there in the prison who report to him what visitors my brother sees. Your value will be nullified if you first go to see Frank and then take action against Grant. It would never do to incur the risk; choose your own path in anything but this."

Trent thought a minute; it was not necessary to see Captain Sutton if the visit entailed danger. "All right," he said. "I suppose you know everything about this Grant?"

"As much as my brother," said Campbell.

It was nearly midnight when Trent left Campbell Sutton in possession. He was now perfectly familiar with every detail of the trial. The innumerable questions he had asked concerning Payson Grant had been answered fully. There was no doubt but that the prisoner had confided everything to his only brother.

CHAPTER III

The Game Begins Again

When Trent had sent a telegram to Mrs. Kinney bidding her remain in Cape Cod until he was ready for her he removed from the hotel to his apartment.

Then at his bank, where the cashier shook hands with him heartily, he drew a large sum of money and took a new check book.

At an automobile mart on Broadway, in the Fifties, he purchased from a reliable concern a second-hand automobile of a make he had previously owned. He bought this make because there were so many of them on the road and its color was not such as to make it remarkable.

Trent was on his way to see a man named David More whom he had frequently employed. When Trent first beheld him, More was a small dyspeptic man weighted down by monetary cares. In those days More was engaged in the credit and collection department of a furniture house which assured anxious home furnishers that their credit was good. It was More's business to ferret out details concerning the life and habits of such as desired their furniture on the installment plan.

When Trent had invented his rich uncle and was living in Central Park, West, he found himself once or twice handicapped by ignorance of the numbers and habits of the servants in some of the great houses he planned to raid. Then it was he thought of David More.

He found that More had lost his position owing to a fire which wiped out his firm. Trent established More in a little detective agency of his own and was his first client. More had an idea that Trent was one high up in the secret service.

Just before the outbreak of the war, More suffered from varicose veins and was unable to make ends meet. Further, his wife was ill and the small home sold up. Timidly he appealed to Anthony Trent, whom he had not seen for a year, to aid him.

Trent dragged from him that it had long been his ambition to retire from a business which kept him so much on his feet and retire to the profitable ease of a store which dealt in tobacco, candy and magazines.

Two brothers who owned such a store in the main street of Fort Lee were selling out preparatory to going to France. Within an hour of hearing of this Anthony Trent had bought the place. Ere the Leviathan left her dock the More family was installed.

The new car pulled up before More's little shop. Beholding his benefactor, More jumped up with eagerness. He stammered out a desire to pay an installment on the property.

"Nonsense," Trent said, smiling; "you can't pay an installment on a gift. Don't mention it again. I've come to take you for a ride if you've the time."

Trent did not mention the subject that brought him until they were going down the hill into Leonia.

"I want your assistance," he began. "Can you go down Asbury way for a week?"

"Glad to" More said eagerly. "Anything at all, Mr. Trent."

"Fine," Trent exclaimed. "The Gugensohn place at Deal Beach has recently been bought by Payson Grant. I want to know his habits, diversions, friends and how and where he passes his time. Also, how many servants sleep indoors and their names. Verify their references and draw on me for what money you need. Here's a hundred as a starter. Before you go down there look in the offices of Sutton and Merton, 28 Broad street. Capt. Frank Sutton was my adjutant; at present he's in Sing Sing. Get some old employee to talk about him and his brother Campbell. Let me know what you find out concerning them before you go down to Deal. I'm anxious for accurate information about Frank Sutton's intimate friends, if he had any. Learn in the office what they think about his guilt."

He dropped More at his store very well satisfied. More would bring him a clearly written report in which nothing was incorporated that had not been learned from some source outside himself.

When Anthony Trent had abandoned journalism for magazine writing he resided for two years in the boarding house of a Mrs. Sauer, whose main weakness was poor judgment in the selection of her cooks, and a too narrow range in her bills of fare. Trent had seen her struggling against fate and had been unable to help her except in paying his bills promptly and occasionally settling those of Mr. and Mrs. Clarke. Clarke had been a celebrated Park Row character whose last position was that of city editor on the paper Trent had abandoned for fiction writing. The demon rum had been Clarke's undoing.

* * * * * * *

It was after he had been gone for some years from the Sauer abode that he learned she was at last to lose her house. This he found out a little time before he enlisted, and this, too, was one of those sudden charities which meant little enough to him but spelled salvation to Mrs. Sauer. He settled her debts in full, installed her in a better house, and made the suggestion, which the grateful woman followed, that she should take Mrs. Clarke into partnership. He had been told since that the scheme had been successful. Mrs. Clarke was a natural-born cook for whom ovens ran true to form and culinary marvels happened as matters of course.

It was to this boarding house in the old Chelsea district that Trent took his way after having seen More. His old landlady insisted that he take coffee and cake with her and Mrs. Clarke after the first greeting was over. She assumed that he had come to talk about some form of repayment.

"Forget it," he said, smiling. "You and the Clarkes were always kind to me, and it was fortunate that I discovered a way of proving my gratitude. I have been in America less than a week, and I only came in to see how you all were."

He rose as Mrs. Clarke, flushed from the heat of the kitchen range, entered the room. She was a large, dignified woman, now completely happy for the first time in twenty years. Prohibition had aided her. Her husband was always at home now. No more haunting visions of seeing him crushed by trolleys or automobiles. No more humiliating moments of inquiry at saloons for him.

"He's writing a book," she assured Trent. "It's about old Park Row."

"Fine," said Trent. "I'd like to see him. Is he in?"

"He's absolutely engrossed in the book," said his wife. "There are times when he won't leave his room."

Trent followed Mrs. Clarke to the top floor. Clarke literally fell upon his old reporter's neck and dragged him in.

"I want this boy for an hour, mother," he said. His wife smiled and left them. The Clarkes had not always been on such amicable terms. Prosperity has much to do with conjugal happiness.

"It was my adjutant who got ten years for attempted murder and embezzlement. Sutton was the name. It was almost three years ago. I suppose you read it?" Trent began.

"Every line," Clarke returned, "from the editorials on it to the slush sisters' sob stuff."

"What did you think of the verdict?"

"Sutton accused the judge of unfairness; that was bad. This accusation of cruelty to his wife hurt him. Hooked up with wild women in gay Paree while his wife was knitting him socks. The judge ruled that out, but it sticks."

"Clarke," said Trent impressively, "Sutton was absolutely devoted to his wife. He had no thought for any one else. There's nothing in that wild woman stuff, believe me. It was invented by Payson Grant, who has since married Mrs. Sutton. Sutton's wife urged him to go to France because she was in love with a slacker who had one of the fifty-seven varieties of flat feet that were invented in 1917. He threatened Grant as any red-blooded man would. Grant's afraid of him, but he has seven more years to enjoy stolen property. He's got a superb mansion down on Ocean drive at Deal Beach, and the woman's he's been hankering for. Seven years is a long time. One of them may be dead by then."

"One of 'em will be dead before that," said Clarke, "or I miss my guess. Didn't you know that Sutton swore he'd break jail and kill Grant?"

"That hurt his chance," Trent said. "I suppose they'll put him under extra guard or something?"

Clarke looked at the younger man with a slight frown.

"Where do you suppose your friend, Sutton, is?"

"Ossining on the Hudson."

"Like h—ll he is," Clarke retorted. "He escaped two weeks back."

Trent stared at him for a moment without speaking. If Clarke were right why had Campbell Sutton persisted in the deception? A dislike he had formed for the man seemed to him now some intuitional sense which had warned him, and not merely a prejudice.

Nature Has Provided for Needs of Aphids

Aphids are the tiny insects that live on the tips of tender plants and the under side of leaves. The extraordinary thing about them is that although they can exist for generations without wings, when the need arises they can grow them in a night. The aphids are sap-suckers. They settle down, drive their beaks into the bark until they reach the sap, then sit contentedly drinking their fill. They are so contented, in fact, that they often shed their skins, casting off legs and eyes, and cling there blind and helpless. Clinging thus, the helpless mothers give birth to their young, who having eyes and legs, run about quite actively until they find the sap streams. The processes are repeated until the plant harbors so many of these tiny creatures that they drink all its sap, and the plant dies. The aphids, having to seek new sources of food, produce a generation of aphids with wings. These they unfurl and then fly to a live plant.—London Tit-Bits.

Still Worse

"That, sir, is a falsehood!" severely said the schoolma'am. "Do you know what will happen to you if you tell lies?"

"Yes'm," nonchalantly replied Skinny Simpson. "I'll go to hell and burn."

"Worse than that! You will be expelled from school!"—Kansas City Times.

SPRINTER BORN, NOT DEVELOPED

That Is Opinion of Coach Jennings of Marquette.

A great sprinter is born, not developed!

Conrad M. Jennings, Marquette university track coach and athletic director, is authority for this statement, and he adds: "I always tell the coach who has a wonderful athlete not to pat himself on the shoulder too hard; he may have had a share in the development of the athlete, but the good Lord did more."

"It is difficult to explain how one may become a track star, instead of just a track athlete," said Coach Jennings. "Throughout the United States and Canada, I would estimate that at least 10,000 college men compete in track athletics. Out of this group but 30 are chosen on the honor roll for the entire country. One can readily see that but a small percentage reach the realm of stardom; that a larger per cent reach the class of the near-greats, and that more than 80 per cent are mediocre. This perhaps is true in all 'human endeavors.'

"There is no question but that athletes must have certain body adaptability for the sports in which they compete, but still more, their minds must dominate and direct the bodies. With the right mental attitude, the boy can develop his body and can go far in his chosen line of sport. I often compare the nervous impulses of the athlete with the timer of an automobile. Unless the mind can send the impulses to the leg muscles at a certain speed, the individual cannot be a great sprinter.

"I do not want to discourage any young man in his track endeavors," continued the Marquette athletic director. "There is no question that consistent training, improvement of one's form and clean living will bring results, and that if the individual has certain inherent qualities he may reach the top rung of the ladder."

Madison Square Garden Takes in Much Money

Gross revenues of Madison Square Garden corporation for 1927 reached $7,650,518, an increase of 3 per cent over 1926. Net income was $1,014,199 after all charges, including federal taxes, equivalent to $3.12 a share on the capital stock outstanding, a gain of 30 per cent over the $2.42 a share earned in 1926 on slightly smaller capitalization.

George L. Rickard, president, informed stockholders that in the last two years the corporation had paid admission taxes of $1,661,871 and other taxes of $746,626, or a total of $2,133,497, exceeding the net income of $1,798,833 earned during the same two years.

The company ended the year with $986,966 cash and cash equivalent out of total quick assets of $1,166,797 and had net working capital of $613,920. A statement of consolidated income for 1926 and 1927 showed receipts from all sources of $2,661,771, of which $1,222,469 was added to capital account for investment in plant and reduction of mortgages, and only $446,479 paid out in dividends.

Sisler Has Average of .353 for Twelve Years

George Sisler last year scored a batting average of .327. At this moment he possesses a lifetime batting average of .343, which is the highest ever registered by a first sacker since the game began in 1876. For a number of years or, up until 1925, George Sisler's batting average of .353 for a lifetime work, stood as the highest ever recorded by a first baseman. This is Sisler's thirteenth season.

Dave Orr and Dan Brouthers, with lifetime batting averages of .352 and .348 respectively, now hold the throne and are the heaviest hitting duo of first basemen the game ever had.

Any Woman Can Look Stylish

By MAE MARTIN

Most stylish looking women you see are simply "good managers." They don't open their pocket-books wide for every change in fashion. They know simple ways to make last season's things conform to this season's styles.

Thousands of them have learned how easily they can transform a dress, or blouse, or coat, by the quick magic of home tinting or dyeing. With true, fadeless Diamond Dyes, anyone can do this successfully. The "know-how" is in the dyes. Each package represents the perfection of 50 years of dye-making. They don't streak or spot like inferior dyes. Now, fashionable tints appear like magic, right over the out-of-style or faded colors. Tinting with Diamond Dyes is as easy as bluing, and dyeing takes just a little longer. Only Diamond Dyes produce perfect results. Insist on them and save disappointment.

She Forgot, but—

Recently Capt. William A. Smith, attorney general, had occasion to investigate the mystery of a jail door that had been been left open in a certain Kansas county. A young man charged with bootlegging had walked out to liberty. It cost the state considerable money to return him to the jail. The investigation finally revealed that the blame attached either to the jailer or to his wife. When questioned the jailer's wife admitted:

"Yes, I left the door open."

"Why did you do that; did you forget to shut it?"

"Yes," she replied, "I forgot to close the door, but I still think it a sin and a shame to keep that nice looking boy in jail."—Kansas City Star.

COUNTRY'S CHILD SAFETY PROBLEM

School closing for the summer vacation is close at hand and the play instinct of hundreds of thousands of children raises again the annual problem of child-safety in traffic. Vacation places upon parents the responsibility of keeping children from streets and highways and intensifies the duty of motorists to watch out for youngsters.

The Public Safety Department of the California State Automobile Association reports that June is the danger month for children in traffic and that statistics on fatalities, gathered throughout the nation, show that June records the highest number of deaths in traffic mishaps of persons under 15 years of age. May ranks second, July third and August fourth in this tragic table.

"Much is being done to educate children of school age to the need of care and caution in traffic," said Percy E. Towne, chairman of the Association Public Safety Committee, "and beneficial results have been secured from the system of traffic safety training now being given in the schools by the Association in co-operation with school authorities.

"But parents should provide a safe place for youngsters to play. It also behooves the car owner, at this time of the year when children are less cautious, to take every precaution to avoid those who wander into the streets.

"One of the first lessons to be taught the child, upon the closing of school, is that he must stay out of the streets. The wise parent will go even further and find a suitable place for the children to develope a natural instinct in a background of safety.

"After a playground has been found, the parents of the very small child, at least, should see to it that the youngster is conducted safely to the place and accompanied home by a responsible person, for the journey both ways is usually made at a time when traffic is at its height."

TITLED ENGLISH WOMAN CHANGES HER OPINION

In the recently published diaries of Lady Frederick Cavendish, two casual references are made to the telephone, indicating how little impression the new instrument made in Great Britain when it was introduced there fifty years ago.

The first reference is dated February, 1878, at Battle Abbey, and states: "Sun evening a wretched new craze called a telephone was brought into play, and F. kept at work shouting down it for a long time: on the whole a failure."

The next reference to the telephone was made in 1881 and by that time she had evidently become more reconciled to it, for she says, while writing at Hawarden, "That enchanting new marvel, a telephone, has been put up, whereby castle and rectory converse ad libitum. Uncle W., who is in some respects the greatest Tory, will have nothing to say to it." "Uncle W.," by the way, was Mr. Gladstone.

"THE RACKET" IS COMING TO THE GEARY THEATRE

The first of a series of New York theatre successes is scheduled to open at the Geary Theatre, San Francisco, beginning Sunday, in the presentation of "The Racket," with the original New York cast.

The entire company has been brought to the coast by Belasco and Butler, by arrangement with Alexander McKaig, the original producer of this unusual offering. When first produced at the Ambassador Theatre, New York, it is credited with having caused a great deal of favorable comment by the novelty of its theme, the rapidity of its action, and the unexpectedness of its hilarious comedy.

Bartlett Cormack, author of the play is a Chicago newspaper man, and has taken for the background of his offering the pre-election warfare between rival political factions of Chicago. Against this background, it is claimed he has painted, with telling strokes, the battle for dominance between a police captain, a political leader and a bootlegger, and the love between a cub newspaper reporter and a cabaret singer.

Among the players here for the production of "The Racket" are John Cromwell, Gladys Lloyd, Edward G. Robinson, Hugh O'Connell, Mal Kelly, Scott Moore, Romaine Callender, Hardee Kinckland, G. Pat Collins, Harry McCoy, Paul Clare, Ricardo DeAngeles, Ralph Adams and others.

SOME BENEFITS OF GOOD ROADS

In good roads, as in so many other ways, the United States leads the world. The splendid, safe highways that are common to us, would in many other countries be considered miracles. We can cross entire states. and go from coast to coast, without encountering dangerous roads.

No public investment pays better. A city with good streets is an attraction to industry and home-seekers; our mountain and country highways. aside from their more practicable uses, are a constant invitation to investigate new parts. We have come to depend on these good roads and they are now necessities of business and pleasure.

Plans are being made for a highway from this country to South America, to be the longest in the world. The possibilities of such a connection are enormous in building international good will, in making it easy for foreigners to see and understand the United States, and for us to do the same.

Good roads bear the same relation to a nation as the arteries do the human body; they give us life and national health, industrially and physically.

OPERATORS HELP BLOCK ESCAPE OF JAIL-BIRDS

While it was the officers of the law who were successful in apprehending the prisoners who recently broke jail in Columbus, Ohio, it was the telephone that led directly to their capture, and more particularly it was Mrs. Mary Berry, telephone operator for the Ohio Bell Telephone Company at Galloway, which showed much initiative in rounding up the culprits.

Mrs. Berry received warning from the Columbus long distance operator that the prisoners were believed to have escaped in that direction. She called Georgesville and learned that the convicts' car had just passed that point. She then called London, where she assisted in getting the sheriff of Madison county and other officials lined up, so that when the prisoners came along the Georgesville-London road the police officials were awaiting them.

VALUE OF ADVERTISING

"The business men of this country are learning," says Fred Mills, head of the advertising agency bearing his name, in Forbes Magazine, "that the value of advertising cannot be measured merely by the effect it has on the public. A man begins by advertising a product, and as his program grows he has to study it to discover its advantages. Before long he discovers, inevitably, its disadvantages, the shortcomings of quality or service subconsciously noted by the consumer—and in order to get the business he improves the product. This is after all the final field of competition—the constant effort to improve product and service and to lower cost—which has made the United States the economic wonder of the world. It is an ideal competition in that it does not bring profit to one at the expense of another, except as the other may fall behind the times. In the long run the determining factor in success is value—what the seller gets depending on what he gives."

MAYOR "JIMMIE" WALKER

Mayor "Jimmie" Walker of New York is best known as a joker and has made a great reputation for his ready wit. Some of his critics have even hinted that as a mayor he is himself a joke.

However that may be, he has recently endeared himself to the South by several graceful acts which have been widely commented upon.

In his recent speech at the unveiling of the head of General Robert E. Lee, on Stone Mountin in Georgia, as a part of the memorial being carved there, Mayor Walker said in the course of his tribute to Lee: "I am proud to be an American, because he was one." He appointed a great-grandson of General Lee to his staff for the official welcome to the German and Irish trans-Atlantic flyers. Besides he has been instrumental in selling $55,000 worth of the Stone Mountain memorial half dollars in benefit of the association's fund.

Such acts tend to foster good will and allay the sectional feeling which too many individuals in public life seem inclined to stir up. Thus, in spite of his apparent frivolous manner, Mayor Walker is proving an asset to his city and his country. It is refreshing to find a man in high position who does not take himself too seriously.

RAPID GROWTH IN USE OF TRANS-OCEANIC SERVICE

Plans to provide an additional trans-atlantic telephone circuit to supplement the present circuit and to care for the rapid growth in the use of the transoceanic service, were announced recently by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. During the month of April the number of calls completed over the present channel between America and Europe increased 55 per cent over the preceding month and 650 per cent over April 1927.

A tract of land comprising about 450 acres has been secured on the Schooley Mountain Range in the northwestern part of New Jersey. The elevation of the tract is about 1150 feet and it is located about one mile northeast of Flanders and three miles distant from Netcong, New Jersey. Here it is planned to establish in the near future a short wave receiving station which, together with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company's sending station at Deal Beach, New Jersey, and similar installations at Great Britain, will provide an additional circuit for trans-atlantic calls.

The location of a short wave receiving station was determined after extensive tests for the purpose of ascertaining the conditions necessary for good short wave reception and freedom from interference. In addition it has been secured to provide for possible future expansions. Construction will be started at an early date on the necessary antenna system.

SOMETHING NEW

The first comet of 1928 was recently found by the French astronomer Phillippoff of the observatory at Algiers in northern Africa.

An airplane with two decks, designed to carry fifty passengers, is being built at Amsterdam.

An Englishman has invented a musical instrument that combines features of the harp and guitar and is played like the guitar, being held horizontally.

An automatic vending machine has been developed which says, "Thank you" after a coin is inserted for the purchase of goods.

A new electric clock, which tells the time by red and white flashes from 16 lamps, has been set up in Baltimore, and can be seen 20 miles.

An X-ray apparatus has been perfected which will photograph the heart at the instant of pause between pulsations, insuring a clear and accurate reproduction.

Scientists have found that in order to distinguish an object the eye must remain in a stationary position about a seventh of a second.

Dr. Dammant of Munich, Germany, has invented an apparatus which will offset the worst attacks of "seasickness" after one to three inhalations.

Two Indiana inventors have patented a heating burner that is claimed to burn raw oil without smoke or odor and without requiring pressure.

A Frenchman has invented a device that makes a phonograph record repeat descriptions of articles displayed in a show window when persons stop to look at them.

Scientists have found that 3,600,000 volts of electricity can be stored in artificial "clouds" and discharged in a ten-millionth of a second.

A new glass substitute is translucent and weatherproof and admits the ultra-violet rays of the sun. Flexible and unbreakable, it is sold in rolls by the yard.

TAXPAYERS RESPONSIBLE FOR ALLEGED HIGH TAXES

"People will never solve their tax problems unless they possess the facts," says Dr. Milbank Johnson, who has made a thorough study of tax fundamentals.

"Anyone who dams officials for crookedness and graft has a mighty weak basis for solving his tax problems. Anyone, however, who can go to the officials of the community and show them the actual facts, show them the methods of obtaining those facts, and arouse confidence in those facts, will do a great work. You will find that they are usually very glad to follow any reasonable advice you may give them.

"Taxpayers themselves, because of their demands on goverment, are responsible for high taxes. Until they stop to think and to plan their budgets for the future, they are going to be in the same condition as the householder or family that takes no thought for the morrow."

Now, if Mexico will only recall the pink boll worm all will be lovely.

WOEFUL WASTE RESULT OF FIRE

Every year in the United States fire consumes property valued at over half a billion dollars. It is an impossibility for imagination to appreciate adequately the magnitude of such a waste. A recent news item adopts the excellent method of driving home the lesson by practical example.

With five hundred million dollars, a four hundred mile paved road could be built at a cost of $25,000 per mile, and a $5,000 house, containing $2,000 worth of furniture, erected every 100 feet on both sides. Each house could have an operating fund of $2,000.

Furthermore, it would build a $500 garage for each house and place a $2,000 automobile in each garage. And after all this was done, there would still be several millions left over that could be distributed among the occupants for spending money.

The inestimable value of practical fire prevention is well brought out by this example. It is a public and personal duty. not to be avoided. Anything we may do to help abolish fire waste will pay us large dividends, in both comfort and cash.

GAS COMPANY GETS LARGEST TELEPHONE SWITCHBOARD

The largest telephone switchboard ever built for an individual customer has recently been installed in the new building of the Consolidated Gas Company in New York City. The board occupies a room 54 feet long by 34 feet wide on the auditorium floor, and contains 600,000,000 feet of wire. The new board has forty-one positions for operators and has a total length of 125 feet.

It is now in order to investigate whether any manufacturer has received orders for a dozen automobiles a block long.

It is said that the "little red school house" is passing. Did anyone ever really see one painted red?

Just turns around, presents his back,

The jury had been dead-locked for two days. The foreman of the jury came to the door and said to the bailiff:
